IGC GRAINS CONFERENCE 2010

Tuesday 8 June 2010

Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre
Westminster London

The new decade: towards greater market stability?

The annual IGC Grains Conference brings together the world's decision-makers and stakeholders to discuss the key issues affecting international markets and trade.

Leading industry and government speakers will present their views on current grains and oilseeds developments and consider scenarios for the new decade. After vigorous expansion in global grains and oilseeds trade in the past ten years, medium-term forecasts suggest continued growth as economies recover from the economic downturn and as demand increases further. While markets remain unpredictable, especially after the dramatic upheavals in recent years, improvements in transparency and a better appreciation of likely future trends are vital ingredients for a more stable trading environment.

With over 400 delegates attending last year's conference and access to an online delegate contacts directory, the Conference provides excellent opportunities for networking.

The Conference will provide simultaneous interpretation in eight languages: Arabic, English, Chinese, French, Italian, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish
